

Catherine Tyree rebounded from a tough winter to win the $50,000 Vermont Summer Celebration Grand Prix with Don't Go at the Vermont Summer Celebration.

Trust Is Key For Catherine Tyree In Vermont

When entering the ring for the $50,000 Vermont Summer Celebration Grand Prix in East

Dorset, Vt., on Aug. 13, Catherine Tyree hoped to win—not necessarily for herself, but for her mount Don't Go.

“I wanted to pull it together for him, because he tries so hard every time we go in the ring,” said Tyree. “He’s such a fighter, and if I have one down, it’s usually a mistake that I made. So, I really wanted to pull it together, and I was really determined when I went into the ring.”

Tyree began her two-week stay at the Vermont Summer Festival with a win in the $10,000 Overland Sheepskin Co. Welcome Stake, but after 4-fault rounds in the $30,000 Manchester & The Mountains Grand Prix and the $10,000 Theory Welcome Stake, she wanted to show that she and “Tom” could walk away with their first grand prix win together.

“He’s one that I can always count on,” she said. “He’s really competitive in the ring, wherever you go, so I’m always pretty confident on him.”

Tyree instantly connected with the gray Oldenburg stallion (Come

On—Laphaela, Raphael) when she purchased him at the beginning of 2013. “He was just so simple and straightforward,” she said. “If I made a little mistake here or there, he wasn’t fazed by it at all, and he just kept going. He has a really big heart, and I think that’s what drew me to him.”

Tom, now 14, hasn’t proven Tyree wrong. Her trust in him helped Tyree get back in the show ring this June after a tough accident five months earlier at the Winter Equestrian Festival (Fla.), when her mare Free Style VH Polderhof collapsed and died of what Tyree said was a suspected aneurysm while competing in a 1.45-meter class. Tyree went to the hospital after the accident and suffered eight fractures in her foot.

“I was on crutches until the end of April, and then I started riding three days after they told me I could walk again,” said Tyree, 22, of Chicago.

“I spent a lot of time at the barn, actually, even though I was on crutches, and I just got to spend a lot of time with my horses,” she continued. “Even if I don’t get to ride them, just being around them is really special. I have such a good relationship with all of my horses, and I love seeing them.

“When I was coming back, Tom was a really good horse to have,” Tyree added. “I did my first class back on him, just because I know him inside and out. The other two horses that I have are relatively new in comparison to him. I know him so well that I felt very safe and comfortable the first few times back in the ring.”

Tyree’s gutsy round in East Dorset was the fastest of eight in the jump-off. “I knew in the jump-off where I would take a bit of a risk, and he was great the whole way around,” said Tyree. “I think I really play off my relationship with him. I was able to just keep galloping, and towards the end of the jump-off especially, I just went and trusted him, and I never really had to take back at all. He jumped great. He jumps really well out of a gallop, so I knew that I could just keep going and trust that he would try to leave the jumps up.”

The pair finished just .02 seconds ahead of their North Run barn mates Addison Gierkink and S & L Slingback.

“I missed a good chunk of the year, and I really just wanted to try and get back in shape and get comfortable again in the ring as soon as possible,” said Tyree. “So that was my main focus. It took a few weeks to figure out my balance again, but I wanted to be on my game as soon as possible for my horses, because they try so hard every time.”

Tyree is about to enter her senior year at Northwestern University (Ill.). “I’m not writing off having a job in the real world,” she said. “I’m very open to anything right now and just kind of seeing what’s going to happen.”

Two things remains certain: She will continue riding, and she will always have Tom. “I do know that horses are always going to be a part of my life,” she said.

A Learning—And Winning—Experience

Since she stands at about 5'1", the 1.40-meter and 1.45-meter jumps in the $10,000 Theory Welcome Stake on Aug. 11 seemed to tower over Alexandra Pielet as she walked the course.

This was the 14-year-old’s biggest class to date, and she and her trainer Valerie Renihan of Findlay’s Ridge LLC in North Salem, N.Y., wanted to use it as preparation for the fall indoor shows and the U.S. Equestrian Federation National Junior Jumper Championships Prix des States (Pa.).

“We walked the welcome, and [Renihan] was like, ‘Oh, it’s kind of big. You have never done this before. We’re just going to do the high [junior jumpers] and be comfortable in it,’” said the teenager from Chicago. “It was a lot to take in. And then [she said], ‘Well, at indoors, it’s going to be this big or even bigger. So I say, why not?’”

Pielet started training with Renihan in February, having only competed in the low and medium junior jumpers at the Winter Equestrian Festival with Co-Pielet LLC’s Helene VE (Diamant de Semilly—Skippy II). But the 9-year-old mare kept impressing Renihan, so the team decided to try the High Junior/ Amateur-Owner Jumper Classic at the Showplace Spring Warm Up I (Ill.), where Pielet and Helene VE were third. They've kept improving since.

"She was an investment from my old trainer," said Pielet. "She was only meant to do the children's jumpers and the low [juniors]. And then we did the mediums and highs. She was only meant to start out little. She's just performing amazing, so we just kept going up."

"You know, you watch her do the children's, and [you think], 'Oh that works, but that's right about what she is,'" said Renihan. "Then they move up to the lows, and you're like, 'Oh, she's cute. She did that nicely.' And then you move to the mediums, and then you move to the highs, and it's the same. And then in the welcome, it was just the same. She doesn't explode over the jumps. She's just such a cool horse. She always tries."

With six horses competing in the jump-off and only one other going clear before her, Pielet decided to go for the blue.

"There was a green oxer that was huge," said Renihan, "and in the jump-off, she turned back inside to that thing and two strides away just kicked on and met it perfectly. I thought, 'Wow. That's impressive.'"

"Going to the jump-off, I really just picked up the pace, and I went for it," said Pielet. "I just wasn't second guessing it."

As a result, Pielet and Helene VE won their biggest class on their first try. "My goal is just to go in and see what I can do," she said. "I never had high expectations, because I'm the youngest one in it. So I was just thrilled with how it went."

The pair concluded the Vermont

Summer Festival with another win in the $10,000 High Junior/Amateur-Owner Jumper Classic, where Pielet was also third on her other mount Borindy.

"She's a lot of fun to train," said Renihan. "She's at the age where it's all exciting, and she's got a great attitude. She's got a great sense of humor, so it makes it really fun, because you can joke with her. And, you know, the other thing is you can put the pressure on her a little bit."

Pielet, who is about to start her sophomore year at Highland Park High School (Ill.), is simply excited to continue pursuing the jumpers, along with the hunters and equitation.

"I like that I can have fun with it," said Pielet, "and I like jumping bigger and going for it in the jump-off and being able to do that." ▶

Seeing Where It Goes

When Sarah Barge of Stone Lane Stables in Bloomfield, N.Y., started her professional career after graduating from Hobart and William Smith Colleges (N.Y.) in 2002, she just wanted to see where it would go.

“I was kind of at a time in my life where I really was trying to decide what I wanted to do,” said Barge. “I started teaching a little bit and riding for Mark Frohm, who is located in Rochester, N.Y., and I just kind of gave it a shot. I thought, ‘This is a time in my life where I can try this out, and if it doesn’t work, it doesn’t work.’ I just gave it a shot.

“It was never a decision, like, ‘This is what I’m going to do for the rest of my life,’” Barge continued. “It just sort of happened. It just worked. It’s a dream come true, honestly, to have such a great business and to do what I love every day.”

The same mentality held true when Barge took the green horse Danturano, owned by her student Sydney Degrazia, in the $15,000 3'3" NEHJA Hunter Derby at the Vermont Summer Celebration on Aug. 11. She didn’t make any definite track plans when entering the ring. She just wanted to see how the horse would feel and make adjustments accordingly. Then Danturano surprised her with a win.

“He’s a wonderful horse,” said Barge of the 8-year-old bay warmblood of unrecorded breeding, a regular competitor in the pre-green hunters. “He’s really come along. When we first got him, he was just a little unsure of himself, but he’s gotten really confident with more mileage. He actually didn’t feel like a pre-green horse out there to me. He felt like he knew what he was doing, and we were just really proud of him to see how much he learned in a few short weeks this summer.”

Degrazia purchased the gelding at the end of the HITS Ocala Winter Circuit (Fla.) from Emil Spadone’s Califon, N.J., and Ocala-based Redfield Farms. The goal was that he would mature into her small junior hunter.

Barge and Danturano had already taken turns around the 3'3" NEHJA Hunter Derby course on two occasions, and they scored a previous win at the Manchester Summer Festival on July 14. This derby, however, provided a new challenge: It included a handy round.

“There was one inside turn that I wasn’t sure if I was going to do with him,” said Barge. “I was going to see how the course went as we started, because he had been a little unsure of himself through the handy turns in some of the other derbies we had done. But he just was really confident, and after we got started, I thought, ‘Well, I guess we can do a nice little inside turn here that I wasn’t really planning on.’ And he did it beautifully.”

With a score of 88, Barge and Danturano surpassed the first round leaders Amy Momrow on Curb Appeal, who finished third, and Jimmy Torano aboard Levland, who took second. 🍎
