French Is Untouchable In WCHR Pro Final

After trading blue ribbons with Scott Stewart all week, John French takes the biggest title.

BY KIMBERLY LOUSHIN AND LAURA LEMON

“So far this show’s been great for me,” John French said in the riders’ introductory video before the start of the World Championship Hunter Rider Professional Final. “As Scott Stewart said to me yesterday, I changed the whole outcome of the show for him by taking away the championship from him in the conformation, taking away the leading professional rider and being the professional national champion. I’m trying to go a step further and beat him Friday night.”

Stewart came back at French in his own segment, wishing French “a lot of luck.”

In the end, French got the last laugh. In the final professional class of the Capital Challenge Horse Show, held Oct. 1-9 in Upper Marlboro, Md., he was untouchable, taking home his fourth WCHR title.

The class features the top six professionals on the WCHR national ranking list in a three-round show-down. For the first two rounds they show borrowed horses before hopping on one of their own mounts for a final handy round.

This year French tacked up Small Gesture, a 7-year-old Holsteiner (Catoki—Vedua), owned by Chris Iwasaki and Liz Reilly.

“I had a few choices, which is nice,” said French. “In years past, I’ve not really had a horse to ride sometimes, and I’d borrow a horse for the final round because the few horses that I bring all the way from California, they did a division with me, and then they had to do the juniors or the amateurs. I thought it was too much.

“For some reason I just felt like this was going to be good for Small Gesture,” he added.

The format of the final is tailor-made for French, who spends much of his time catch riding. He won all three rounds, earning identical scores of 90.66 on his borrowed mounts Alant and Everglow before posting a 90 with Small Gesture. He was the only professional to score in the 90s.

So what helped French take the win?

“I just tried not to think so much,” said French, Paso Robles, Calif. “That’s my new thing, just go in there and don’t even think. That’s something I read in sports books about how people like golfers get ready or get in the zone. I always read ones that say you just don’t think when you get nervous or for a big competition like this. I just tried that, and it worked pretty well.”

“That’s my new thing, just go in there and don’t even think.”

Catch Me Rises To The Challenge

While Stewart spent much of his week following French in victory parades, he did get to lead the WCHR Professional Challenge with Catch Me.

“It feels awesome,” said Stewart, Flemington, N.J. “I thought that [second round] was probably one of the best rounds that I’ve ever had on any horse. He tries so hard. Even though he’s a bit tired he went in there, and he really tried. I think even from Round 1, the scores seemed higher than they’ve ever been for everybody. It seemed like it was a good class, so it means a lot to be able to do that.

“It’s all the horse really,” he added. “That’s a special horse. There aren’t too many like him. He’s a [good] mover. He jumps great. He’s so nice to ride; it’s easy.”

But initially Stewart had his doubts about the 9-year-old Holsteiner (Casiro—Wonne I) owned by David Gochman, since the horse was originally being considered for

“I didn’t particularly like him,” said Stewart. “At home he can be very spooky and suspicious of the jumps. I didn’t feel like I was trying a horse for her. It didn’t feel like it was going to be an amateur horse, but I knew he was a great jumper and all of that.

“I had actually tried him a year or two before, and for some reason we didn’t buy him then either. At the shows—and now at home—he’s like a different horse. He’s always fun to ride now,” Stewart continued.

For now Stewart will continue to show “Snoopy,” but once the Gochman daughters Sophie and Mimi are more confirmed in the junior hunters, he’ll likely start showing with one of them.

“Si Bene” To New Beginnings

In Italian, “si bene” roughly means, “yes, good.” But to Amber Henter, “bene” doesn’t quite describe Si Bene’s performance at the WCHR Developing Pro Challenge. The pair’s top scores reflected a year of transition and partnership that all fell into place at the best time.

“I couldn’t believe he just showed us so much this week,” said Henter. “He hasn’t been to indoors or anything. We’ve been working all year in the first year division, and it finally all came together. I feel like he could not have been better. It’s a really good feeling knowing that he was really on his game all week.”

Henter works for Val Renihan, who’s helped her show and develop Si Bene all year, at Findlay’s Ridge LLC in North Salem, N.Y., and Wellington, Fla. “I think he’s peaked. He’s there. He’s ready for the next step.”

The duo united last summer, when “Zip,” a 9-year-old of unrecorded breeding owned by Findlay’s Ridge Group, was freshly imported, and Henter was transitioning into the professional world after riding for the University of South Carolina, serving as hunt seat team captain for three years and helping the Gamecocks earn the NCEA National Championships in 2015.

When Renihan offered her an assistant rider and coaching job, Henter figured she would try her hand as a professional, despite not competing on the circuit for four years.

“I wasn’t really thinking about [the WCHR Developing Professional Challenge] just because I haven’t ridden that much,” she said. “Last year was my first time going to indoors in five years—not competing, just training. So I knew about the class, and I was like, ‘Oh well, might as well give it a try.’”

Henter focused on trusting her year-long partnership with Zip. “As soon as I put one leg on, he’s right there with me,” Henter said. “He knows exactly where I want him to go. So when I went in the ring, I just wanted to focus on details and let the chips fall in their place.”

Henter led the class throughout the two phases to take home the title, and she couldn’t be more proud of Zip.

“I know him so well, I was really hoping that we’d have a great outcome,” said Henter. “He deserves it all the way. We’ve kind of been teetering in the ribbons all year. And I feel like he finally got his recognition this weekend.”

From Capitol Hill To Capital Challenge

Most years during indoors Grace Stuntz is stuck in her office on Capitol Hill, but in an election year, her boss, a senator from Tennessee, is back home talking to his constituents, which affords her the opportunity to take a couple of days off to compete.

“I’m lucky,” she said. “They’re pretty flexible. It’s pretty strict if the

► Tidbits

► Though KATIE ROBINSON has attended Capital Challenge for years, family obligations have always prevented her from showing in the WCHR Challenges. But this year, in the 11th hour, she decided to compete, which paid off with a win aboard MAHALO in the WCHR Adult Amateur Challenge.

Robinson, 49, of New York City, typically shows in the amateur-owners, but with her horses resting this fall, trainer Andre Dignelli suggested she ride the 16-year-old warmblood owned by Further Lane Farm. While she'd never shown Mahalo before, Robinson was familiar with the gelding since her daughter Maggie has been trying him out.

"It's awesome," said Katie. "I feel so special. It's not just about the professionals or the grand prix riders. We're all in this sport; we all love it, and it's nice to feel special. They really do a good job at that."

► MISSY LUCZAK-SMITH earned the WCHR Low Amateur-Owner Challenge title after the initial winners, LINDSAY MAXWELL and KINGSTON, were disqualified. Maxwell competed her gelding in the amateur-owner division prior to competing in the low amateur-owner challenge. Show manager Oliver Kennedy explained that if she'd taken a different horse or had shown Kingston in the lower height all week, she would have kept her title.

EXECUTIVE and Luczak-Smith were only 0.66 points behind Maxwell, and the rest of the competitors also moved up a placing with Maxwell's disqualification.

"I went straight from here to work yesterday," she continued. "I got off of the hack at 3:15 and was in a meeting by 4. I worked until 8 last night and was like, 'I have to go to bed; I've been up since 4. It's no longer making sense; I'm no longer constructive.'"

So on Oct. 6 she took the full day to focus on riding her longtime partner Fitzhugh. And it paid off in spades with a win in the WCHR Amateur-Owner Challenge.

►Double Winning Weekend For Fithian

Reliving their glory days, Allison Fithian and Lucky D' Etencin took home wins in the North American Adult Amateur Equitation Championships and the Ariat Adult Medal Finals at the Capital Challenge Horse Show. LAURA LEMON PHOTO

Originally from Monterey, Calif., Fithian shipped out to Beacon Hill Show Stables in Colts Neck, N.J., in 2010 to train with Stacia Madden for her last junior year before heading off to New York University.

"She has a chemistry with this horse that is just second to none," said Madden. "I felt bad for her in her last junior year because he got a little bit injured. She was third at [USEF/Pessoa] Medal Finals that year, which was unbelievable. Then she had to use a different horse for Maclay Finals.

"[The Fithians] did the right thing and got the horse feeling right," continued Madden. "Then he was good to go. He was too young to be done. And she was at school, so they leased him out to a few junior riders."

While Fithian buried herself in psychology books, the Selle Français (Narcos II—Bruvere D' Etencin) continued campaigning Beacon Hill equitation riders from Victoria Press to Lucy Deslauriers. However, after the equitation finals last season, "Lucky" needed a slowdown. And this new workload fit Fithian's schedule as a paraprofessional with autistic kids in New York City, as she also plans to pursue her master's in occupational therapy.

With horse and rider reunited, Fithian and Madden made

What do you do after concluding your junior equitation career? If you're Allison Fithian, you hold on to your equitation horse and unexpectedly circle back to the equitation ring five years later to win not just the North American Adult Amateur Equitation Championships, but also the Ariat Adult Medal Finals.

Fithian purchased Lucky D' Etencin nine years ago to be her equitation mount. From 2007 to 2011, they won equitation classes on both sides of the United States.

of the class because I'm not worried about what everyone else has done before me," she said. "I can just go in, get it over with—whatever will happen will happen, and luckily I didn't pull, and he was great."

Stuntz has had Fitzhugh, a 13-year-old brown gelding of unrecorded breeding, since he was 4 and just starting his career at 2'6".

"It's been fun watching him grow up because he's sort of taken a little bit longer than some, and he can get nervous," she said.

Stuntz had a successful junior career, but when she went off to the University of Virginia she intended to take time away from the horse world. She lasted two weeks before she rang up Claiborne Bishop at The Barracks Farm to see if there was anything she could ride.

"She put me on her daughter's really nice horse, and I was like, "This is fun! I miss this.' I was leasing something by November, so my quitting worked really well," said Stuntz, 28.

Stuntz earned her bachelor's degree in biomedical engineering and a master's degree in public policy before heading to Washington, D.C., to see if she could get her foot in the door.

"I just did what everyone else does when they look [for a job] on the Hill," she said. "They go door-to-door and say, 'Hey, I can live at home if I have to, I can work for free, I can answer phones. I just want to be here.'"

Her graduation date coincided with a big Food and Drug Administration bill up for reauthorization in 2012, something that was right up her alley. She worked as an administrative assistant for the person working on the bill, and when he left, she took over his position.

it the year's goal to reach the Ariat Adult Medal Finals.

"This is going to be really reuniting the two of them at this horse show," said Madden. "It feels a little bit like unfinished business."

Her family flew in from California to see Fithian lead the class from start to finish.

"It feels really good to be able to do this well as an adult," said Fithian. "I feel really proud of myself that I am still able to compete at that level. And kind of verification for my riding abilities."

These days Stuntz keeps “Fitz” at Merry Point Farm LLC in Round Hill, Va., making the trek from D.C. to ride on the weekends, while the team at the farm keeps Fitz fit during the week. She still meets up with Bishop at shows.

“I’m lucky that I have the support network back home with Claiborne realizing that I’m going to make a mistake,” she said. “I ride two times a week; I show 10-15 times a year. I can’t go to Florida. I can’t travel a lot. I tried that for a while with working, and it was too stressful. It’s nice to still be able to come and compete with the best ever that you read about all the time. It’s fun. I’m very lucky to have the balance that I do.”

Executive Passes His Test

When Missy Luczak-Smith learned she had qualified for the WCHR Low Amateur-Owner Challenge, just the chance to compete thrilled her. Since purchasing her warmblood (Popeye K—Cloud Nine), Executive, almost two years ago, Luczak-Smith’s followed the “go slow” motto, giving the green gelding enough time to understand his job and not be overfaced. So when she entered the Prince George’s Equestrian Center, she just enjoyed her moment.

“I think that it’s been a year of learning, and we’ve just gone really slow,” said Luczak-Smith. “And at Capital Challenge it just all came together.

“The competition is about as good as it can get,” she continued. “But [the WCHR]’s a really fun class, and it’s like icing on the cake to qualify.”

Executive, 8, scored an 86 average from the judges, making Luczak-Smith feel like her green horse had turned a corner.

“Instead of losing steam, he just builds and just becomes a better competitor with each day,” she said. “He really tries to learn each time he comes into the ring.

“When I picked up the canter and went to the first jump, I just felt like it was completely in sync,” Luczak-

Smith continued. "And I could tell, he was prepared. He was focused. And it was really fun. You never know what you're going to get with a young horse until you pick up your canter and head to the first jump."

For Luczak-Smith, 50, Charlotte, N.C., the uncertainty of the performance makes her experiences with Executive all the more enjoyable.

"That's the fun thing, for me, about having a young horse," she said. "It's a nice test for both of us and to learn when we go in the ring what we have and what we don't have." 🐾
