Jay Duke Announces 2019 Spring Clinic Series!

Jay Duke, former Canadian Equestrian Team member turned renowned clinician and course designer, has announced his spring clinic schedule. Featured stops include weekend clinics throughout Canada and the U.S.

"Anybody that has a positive attitude and wants to learn can be successful, and that is what I find most enjoyable about teaching a wide array of different riders through clinics. Often, the lessons are not so different from the lower level to the higher level; it's the expectations and technicality that vary. I try to get the most from every horse and rider and produce a positive result where both did something they didn't think they were capable of doing. Sometimes that's winning in the show ring or just jumping around a course at home." - Jay Duke

Jay Duke clinics focus on safe and effective riding that showcases both horse and rider in the best way. Jay evaluates all aspects, including tack, equitation, style, and form before digging into his library of flat and jumping exercises that are guaranteed to result in improvement.

Jay Duke competing his horse Grappa (now known as top U.S. hunter Mindful) at Spruce Meadows.

With a 30-year riding and training resume, Jay competed at the top level of show jumping, including Nations' Cup appearances throughout North America. Additionally, he developed a reputation for developing young horses from the ground up. Jay, who retired from the show ring in 2014 to focus on teaching and course designing, draws on that experience to share a lifetime's worth of knowledge with up-and-coming riders, as well as those simply wishing to add a little polish to their equitation or riding routines.

Kicking off the spring season, Jay will travel to Ardrossan, Alberta, Canada for a three-day clinic at Pinnacle Equestrian from February 5-6. Clinic organizer Jenn Arbuckle can be contacted by e-mailing jenn_arbuckle@hotmail.com.

Jay continues his spring schedule from February 8-10 at Rose Bush Equestrian Center in Fort Saskatchewan, Alberta. Clinic organizer Kayla Bushell can be reached at rosebushequineservices@hotmail.com.

During March, Jay will be traveling to horse shows throughout Canada and the U.S., but still has limited openings for weekend clinics.

"Rarely have I seen 100% of the participants in a clinic improve. The riders rode more specifically, softly, and effectively. The horses responded with willingness and lightness."

~Martha McDowell,
FEI eventing rider

Jay will spend April 6-7 at Rosenol Sport Horses in Prince George, British Columbia, Canada for a two-day clinic. Contact clinic organizer Lana Smith at lane-smith@live.ca for more information or to participate.

Jay will then visit Billings, Montana, from April 20-23 to present a clinic to the eventers of High Plains Stables, home of 3* event rider Martha McDowell. Contact marthatmcd@gmail.com with clinic inquiries.

Continuing his stay in Montana, Jay will teach a clinic at Holloway's Pretty Good Horse Barn in Bozeman from April 26-28. Meggan Holloway can be reached at goodhorses@live.com for more information.

Spring 2019 clinic dates now available!

Jay's spring schedule still has a couple openings left for clinics throughout North America.

A range of packages are available, from single to four-day sessions, featuring training that draws on three decades of experience. Each clinic includes a sampling of Jay's extensive library of flat, gymnastic, and jumping exercises.

With extensive first-hand knowledge of the jumping discipline, Jay customizes his clinics to meet the needs of any level horse and rider.
