The Risk and Duty of Designing Jump Courses

SIDELINES

When it comes to course designing in the jumper rings, safety of the horse and rider is the greatest concern. However, it's also a course designer's job to create a track that presents a level of difficulty appropriate for the class. Armand Leone of Leone Equestrian Law reflects on the duty of course designers.

Transition Programs Protect Your Horse's Future

HORSE NETWORK

Not every horse at Days End Farm Horse Rescue was neglected or abused. Karisma, an 11-year-old Thoroughbred mare, arrived at DEFHR through a transfer from the Maryland Equine Transition Services, an equine safety net initiative of the Maryland Horse Council that provides safe alternatives for owners needing to transition and rehome horses.
