Highlights From World Equestrian Center – Wilmington Spring II

Kady Abrahamson (USA) and Any, owned by Abrahamson Equestrian LLC, were victorious in the $25,000 Grand Prix.

“I brought Any after she jumped some FEI classes in Kentucky to give her an easier week before July. I know that Any is wicked fast, and I don’t want to run her off of her feet. She is so fast in the turns and across the jumps that it makes her that much quicker.”

Samantha Cooper and Nandino, owned by Ellen Malson, captured the top prize in the $10,000 USHJA National Hunter Derby. The pair earned high scores of 89 and 91.

“I felt like he was a bit tired this morning, but he power walked in for the handy. He always really enjoys the handy round. The course was beautiful. All the décor outside makes it so fun to show here.”

This week’s Wilmington Sunday Spotlight shines on World Equestrian Center’s longtime announcer Dan McCarthy who has been an equestrian for more than 63 years. McCarthy spent the past ten years supporting WEC – Wilmington and announcing at the facility. Infamous for his encouraging words in the Roberts Arena, McCarthy has continued to grow his love for equestrian sport and implement what it means to be a true horseman. After spending the week of his 90th birthday at WEC – Wilmington Spring II, we met up with McCarthy to learn more about his riding career, his background in the industry, his love for announcing and his passion for World Equestrian Center.
