

Highlights From World Equestrian Center – Wilmington Winter Classic I

Sam Pegg (CAN) and Gin Tonic 158, owned by Ten Sixty Stables, were victorious in the $30,000 Grand Prix.

“I think Guilherme Jorge does a great job with the courses. We were busy at home so we couldn’t come until Thursday night. My horses jumped a class yesterday instead of the Welcome. Typically, the horses jump better as the week goes on with his courses. He is very progressive and doesn’t overtake the horses, but it is difficult at the same time.”

Michaella Gerlacher and Callestino, owned by Frances Conti, captured the top prize in the $15,000 USHJA National Hunter Derby. The pair earned high scores of 90 and 87.

“The course was really good for him. He loves to get on a nice gallop and continue going forward. I didn’t want to risk it with the inside turns because he is still quite young. He is still in his 3’3” green year so he still has more to learn.”

Corri Goldman (USA) and her own Gattaca de Vains won the $10,000 Futures Prix.

“She is a 7-year-old Selle Français. I bought her in her 6-year-old year. I saw videos of her and loved her and begged her breeder to sell her to me. They finally said yes, and I went and tried her. I rode her for five minutes and knew she was the one. She’s fast, careful and brave. There is nothing else that I could ask of this mare.”
